Optional: put Onboarding in Engineering space

Low-priority/V2: The case for housing Onboarding in the "Engineering" space

As a new hire, where do I assume I can find information?
Linking to onboarding guides is not enough to assume accessibility. Information overload is both common and likely in first 1-5 days, and links are easily lost or forgotten.
Content isn't large, and is unlikely to expand over time.
Content meant for onboarding should be:
    1. Searchable - take advantage of Confluence's search so it is easily found
    2. Independently discoverable - where is the most likely spot for this to be located?
Still accessible to other orgs - Engineering-related onboarding, even if useful to IT, should be in Engineering documents, just as IT docs house all-org references for setup.

Current Engineering space; unorganized content, no links. Does not satisfy expectation.

Important info highlighted, onboarding in intuitive order, descriptive and cohesive with eng